

HIGH-STRENGTH CONCRETE CYLINDERS SUBJECTED TO AXIAL IMPACT

M. Elfahal, and T. Krauthammer

Protective Technology Center, Penn State University, State College, USA

T. Ohno and M. Beppu

Department of Civil Engineering, National Defense Academy, Yokosuka, Japan

and

G. Markeset

Norwegian Defence Construction Service, Oslo, Norway

ABSTRACT

Geometrically similar high strength concrete cylinders of different sizes were subjected to axial impact, both numerically and experimentally. The results were used to investigate the size effect phenomenon for high strength concrete under time-dependent compressive loads.